Dundurn Murmurs.

Mr. Proctor gave a card party on Wednesday evening last.

Most of the ranchers have started to feed their cattle.

It is reported that there is to be a concert at the closing of the school.

We always thought that Charlie would go to Saskatoon once to often. The last time he did not return alone. He brought Daisy with him.

Hearing it reported that Prince had a sway back we at once saw our way to making a fortune, but on going to interview Mr. Prince for the purpose of making arrangements to travel him as a curiosity, it turned out that it was a horse, and not a person. Prince himself which had the sway back.

We have heard of many queer places for hiding out, but the queerest of all is where Ben found one the other day. How did it come there, Ben?

I can't get a wink of sleep for thinking of how I am to get in those hot tail-coats.

While out hunting his cattle Joe's horse shied at something that was glistering brightly in the sun, and stumbled over what Joe took to be a few posts, but on recovering himself he found that what he had taken to be a few poles was G. S. Carroll and the stovepipe was the cause of the horse shying.

Mr. Chas. Lake, of Spring Creek, paid the settlement a visit during the week.

There was a party at the Court House the other evening.

We see a new driver on the morning express now. Any person wishing to catch the early train for the south could not do better than avail himself of this chance.

Miss Blackley entertained some friends at tea and cards on Thanksgiving night.

Daisy was received with open arms on Saturday.

We understand Jim made a quick trip out to Spring Creek and return. We think he drove the white face mare. Pretty fast, Jim—fourteen miles in less than the hour and a half.

Master John Clarke is spending the week with his friend Harry.

We did not know that Jack was a fighting man, but judging from the appearance of his nose we should think he has entered the ring.

We will second your motion, Tom, for whoever you move to be chairman of the concert.

No, I won't have him chairman.

Archie, can you carry the cake up in a jump or should we bring the hay rack?

The Ahem! Poet's Answer.

You thought, my dear Smiler, that my temper you'd rile.

When you and your friends all sat down in a row.

To lay me out quickly; but your efforts were sickly.

And most of your verses don't rhyme you'll allow.

Your rags might be witty, but not very pretty.

The beautifully personal without a small doubt.

But as to the novel, and fortune, and shovel.

Allow me to tell you, my friends, you are out.

You say in the valley there does dwell a Sally.

And as you do say so I'll give you that point:

And doubtless 'twas Sally who lived in the valley.

Who knocked your fine nose for the time out of joint.

You may be high flown but you should not have blown.

About my not writing again for two years.

In the houses and highways, and shanties and byways.

You let it all out so that everyone hears.

Thanks for the goat and the rub at my coat.

'Tis mine, you can't say that of yours, my dear friend.

You may be bursting with riches, but even your breeches

Are of more you own to sell or to lend.

Your rhyming was fine, but some other time

You'll do better if only you are left in peace:

Still I'll like all to know and have a good blow

At the poet they now have got in the place.

And now, my dear friend, this thing I will end

Before I commit an error, this thing I will end

Allow me to say ere I put this away.

That you were the boy with a grin.

And now, Mr. Smiler, this answer I'll riler.

And challenge you just to go rhyming again.

I'm open for drubbing and trust that the scrubbing

In the place you have gone to does not cause you pain.

Now ere I arise I'd like to advise

You to write your next to me yourself.

And not get a score to help you—or more.

Or your next may be laid on the shelf.

Ta, ta, my dear friend, this pleasure must end

I'm sorry to leave you so quickly

I know you are bold so you won't mind the cold

And when you see this won't feel sickly.

And if it should be that you answer me

In prose or poetical rhymes,

I'd like you to blow your trumpet you know

Through the medium of the Jaw Times.

AGRICULTURAL.

FALL CARE OF MEADOWS.

The most important crop in this country is the grass crop, and this is the most neglected and abused. As writes C. P. Goodrich. This is especially true of meadows. They are in early spring and they are in the fall and early winter. It is an extent that on many farms the yield of hay is reduced one-half from what it would have been had the meadows been properly cared for. A meadow, if well set with grass, would produce good crops of hay for several successive years—four or five at least—if it is properly cared for. As all farmers know, there is at the foot of each stalk of Timothy a small bulb something in appearance to a diminutive onion. After the stalks are cut these little bulbs form the seed ones which die. These new ones are the ones from which the new crop of hay will grow. There is a very slight aftermath from Timothy that grows up from these new bulbs as they are forming and growing, and they are easy to be seen on the ground. It is important that this aftermath and root development should be allowed to proceed to the fullest extent possible in the fall, for a good root development in the fall cannot be a good crop in the spring. The growth of aftermath is stopped or clipped off close in the fall, the root growth will be light and the consequences are stated. The worst consequences follow pasturing with sheep in the fall, in addition to keeping down the growth of aftermath, the roots or bulbs are injured by the trampling of the stock. This pasturing of meadows in the fall, which is a common practice, is most wasteful and ruinous. For the sake of a few dollars or perhaps weeks pasturing in the fall, the farmer may be unknowingly sacrificing half of his next year's crop, and instead of getting two crops of hay to the acre he is only getting one, and only one crop of hay to the acre. The fact is quite often lost sight of. A crop of hay, especially Timothy, is an extensive one. The yield of a good crop of hay is from one to two tons per acre. Most grasses, whether or not clover in this, draw their nourishment from near the surface of the ground, and they are something to do to replace what is taken away the inevitable result will be a diminished crop each year. The meadow needs an occasional dressing of manure as much as any other part of the farm. Fall is the time to haul the manure that has accumulated about the yards during the summer. It should be spread evenly over the meadows. It will be a good winter protection to the roots of the grass, and the rains of winter and spring will wash out the fertilizer of the manure and deposit it in the surface soil where the grass roots want it to be. There is no place where it will be so much more where it will bring a return as on grass land. We are only largely increase the crop of grass but corresponding increase the root growth so that when the soil is covered up for another year, the manure is in the surface soil where the grass roots want it to be. There is no place where it will be so much more where it will bring a return as on grass land. We are only largely increase the crop of grass but corresponding increase the root growth so that when the soil is covered up for another year, the manure is in the surface soil where the grass roots want it to be.

A Story of Money and Matrimony.

For nearly an hour Horatio Dexter had been upon his knees in front of Flavia Johnson, pouring out his love. He was no ordinary passion: He had worshipped the beautiful girl from the moment that his eyes had first looked into hers.

"Flavia," he implored, "have mercy! Can't you see that if you will not become my wife there will be no hope for me?"

"No, don't say that," she returned in low, sweet accents; "you will get over it. Three years ago Titus Henderson told me the same thing. Now he is married to another and the father of twins. I know that he is happy. You will forget me as he has forgotten me. You will meet some one else and love her, and then, in good time, be happy with your twin—I mean your family, as he is."

"Ah," he bitterly replied, "others may be happy with their twins. I do not care for them. You—you, Flavia, are what I want. You are the pole star of my existence. Say that you can learn to love me. Say that I may at least hope. Do not compel me to go away and destroy myself! Save me, Flavia, save me!"

"Poor boy!" she said, stroking his curls. "I am sorry for you. I wish I were not so lovely. It is terrible, this thing of driving people mad for love of me. I will give you a little lock of my hair, which you can wear next to your heart. Perhaps that will help you to get over it."

"Not!" he sobbed. "I don't think a lock of hair or any heart would do but of good. It would only tickle me. I am very ticklish, Flavia. Keep your hair. You may need it some day. Now, I'm going to give you just one more thing."

She bent and pressed her rich, ripe lips against his forehead, and then replied: "Alas, I cannot. I am promised to another, who makes more money in a day than you earn in a week. It nearly breaks my heart to have to tell you this, but you have forced me to do so. We were things arranged differently, I could be happy with you, for love is knocking at the door of my heart."

Horatio Dexter got up, looked to see if his trousers were badly bagged at the knees or not, and then, in cold, harsh tones, said:

"Well, inasmuch as it seems to be a money transaction with you, I suppose I ought to pay you something for the time that you have wasted in hearing my story. How much do I owe you?"

She departed, saying:

"The day will come when you will be sorry that you permitted the desire for money to kill your love."

That was five years ago. To-day she is a grass widow, living upon a miserable alimony of $11 a week, while he, a lawyer with salary and fees of $12,000 a year, and a clerk hired at the expense of the public, to do the work.

Often does the now miserable woman say to herself:

"What a fool I was! I might have known from the businesslike proposition he made that night that he could not love!"

DUPPLICITY.
Wiggins—How in the world could you have the face to tell Miss Oldmixon that her commission reminded you of a peach?

Wiggins—You have been a gray, spotted, wrinkled old peach, haven't you?

AT THE TRACK.
That horse has a first-class pedigree, observed his friend.

Yes, said the man who was not going to run for his money, but he's going to be the last of his race.

SAW HIM UNMASKED.
Misses—Not going to marry that sweep after all, Janet? Why, I thought it was settled.

Janet—No, mum, but the fact is I saw him with a clean face the first time last night and I can't marry him. You'd no idea how ugly he is when he's washed, mum.

SWEETLY CHARITABLE.
What is unconventional, Uncle Jim? Unconventional? Well, it is being too good-natured to get on with people who haven't any manners.

THE HOME.

THE LINEN CLOSET.

Many housewives view with pride their well-filled linen chests and closets. Towels, bed and table linen form quite an important item among the general household supplies, and considerable care and attention is required to keep it all in neat order. A closet or chest of drawers devoted especially to the linen is a necessity, if everything is to be nicely kept, and great care needs to be taken to close it against flies and dust. The smooth piles of tablecloths, napkins, sheets, pillowcases, towels, and possibly soft fleecy blankets, and new quilts, all clean and sweet smelling, exhibit care and thrift on the part of the housewife.

The nicest linen and that which needs the most careful selection is for the table. Table cloths should be long enough to reach at least fourteen inches over each end of the table. Handsome cloths with a dozen napkins to match come in lengths of from two yards to two and one-half and longer. Some housekeepers prefer to buy the cloths by the yard, but then one cannot always procure napkins to match. The best table linen should be hemmed by hand, and the particular woman does the same with all her linen and towels which need it.

The ravellings of new linen, as that from napkins, should be carefully saved and used for darning when the cloths show signs of wear. If mending is attended to just as soon as the tiniest hole shows, or a place wears thin, it will be found that the article wears much longer. Cotton thread should always be used in mending linen. A needle with a long eye will receive the linen ravellings without trouble, and is far better than the ordinary small-eyed needle. In order to bring out the beauty in linen it should be ironed quite damp on the right side with a hot iron. And to secure that desired stiffness the iron should be run over the linen perfectly dry. Fold the tablecloth down the center lengthwise, once, then press and roll. Do not fold, for that will crease them. Fold napkins in thirds, so that the center of the napkin will be the center of the square when folded. A well ironed tablecloth will look fresh much longer than one poorly done.

The housewife who wishes to be careful of the tablecloths has a good supply of carving and tray cloths. Some of these may be very plain, and others may be of fine linen, and others may be hand-somely embroidered, just as suits the fancy.

A good supply of nice bed linen is necessary in the well-regulated household. The very least that one can get along with for each bed are three sheets and four pillow slips. This allows of two clean sheets and clean pillow slips once a week. In case of sickness this would be wholly inadequate. The careful housewife adds to her stock of linen every year, and the sheets are kept on hand in a sufficient supply. Sheets and pillow cases are best if made of the regular sheeting. For sheets that two and one-half yards long, one and one-half yards wide, and one and one-half yards long, otherwise they cannot be tucked snugly under the ends of the mattress. Sheetings which are longer than the pillow, and a hen from two to four inches is generally turned in.

Of towels, one cannot have too many. Linen towels are the best, of course, even if they are cheaper at first cost. The big, soft, Turkish bath towels are excellent. They wear well and are not hard to launder. Then there are several sizes of coarse linen toweling which makes excellent towels. Cut into lengths of one and one-half yards, and hemmed, they are very useful. For the bath, one should have a supply of damask towels. These are fine, soft and handsome, and every housekeeper likes to have some of these in her linen store. Towels which are bought by the dozen, come cheaper, so it is generally economy to buy them that way.

DISH WASHING.
It is a great help to the mother to have the dish washing taught to her hands. If she has young daughters they should be taught to do this light and simple duty, and do it well. Boys, too, are frequently taught to help their mothers and the mother who follows such a course is wise indeed. Where a boy has sisters he no doubt resents doing what he terms "girls' work," yet there are a number of duties he should be held responsible for such as changing the linting wool and always keeping the wood-loft full, keeping the corn-cob in order, etc. All this will spare hard work for the mother. The child who is taught implicit obedience through fear, but through firmness, will do willingly what it is told. The mother who must coax or threaten her child into doing her bidding has no one but herself to blame for such a state of affairs. Many a mother would rather do everything herself than ask help from her children simply because they make such a fuss about doing anything.

It is a noticeable fact that most girls "hate" to wash dishes and that they enjoy it usually have the best method of doing their work. It is no wonder that washing dishes as it frequently done is disagreeable. A gray cloth, small pan, sufficient hot water, etc., certainly make a hard work of it. We may as well get a girl to enjoy dish washing as to provide plenty of hot, soapy water and a large pan. The cloth should be white, sweet smelling, and soft. The towel should be perfectly clean and plenty of them provided. When the dishes are cleared away, the child should be taught to wash the sink and a place for the water. Then if boys are washed in proper order in hot water.

before wiping the work becomes very simple. The child must be taught to do this simple work right. First the glassware, then the silver, following with the china is the order practiced. When once learned, such a lesson is never forgotten, and it certainly is of great value in knowing the correct way of doing everything.

After the dishes are done the cloth should be washed up in soapy hot water, rinsed and hung out of doors to dry, preferably in the sunshine. The towels should be hung up likewise in hot water and hung up to dry. They will then be clean and sweet for the next time. In this way so many towels will not find their way to the week-end and it is far more than the cause of more broken and cracked dishes than anything else. After the dishes are put away the dishpan should be washed up and set away, and the sink or tub where the work was done should be scrubbed and made clean with soap and warm water will allow a mother is wise who makes work pleasant for her child. She will find them eager to help her instead of unwilling and thus afford her much comfort and pleasure.

SOME NOTES ON MEATS.

Never wash any meats unless from necessity, as washing takes from them a large part of their nutriment.

Meat with yellow suet is not fit for use, and should be destroyed; an examination by a veterinary will always show some organic disease in the animal.

The directions given above for beef will apply to the other meats named, the different methods of "hashing," and making of "made" dishes being given in another article. Any one who can cook and serve meats in simple form, can make any of the French style dishes, as they depend mostly on the ingredients used, and not so much on skill.

When cooking lamb remember that it takes almost as much time as mutton. It is much more nutritious than mutton, and more beautiful, but has the disadvantage of increased cost in this country.

We do not include pork in the list of meats, as it is not fit to eat in any quantity, and is perfectly indigestible.

Never use hard about meats; always use good butter when required. Beef is served well-done, and underdone; but mutton, veal, lamb and game are always served well-done.

The best sauces for the different meats are, for roast beef, brown gravy, with mushrooms if you prefer; boiled beef, catsup, or horseradish; broiled meats of all kinds, butter, rubbed on only; for roast veal, white sauce; for chops and cutlets, fried, although I hope none of my readers will be guilty of such a trifling error, any of the French made sauces.

Garnish to taste; or parsley for beef, beets or celery for veal, and tomato apples, for roast lamb. Unless served with mint sauce, when sprigs of fresh mint may be used.

BE CONSIDERATE.

Parents are seldom considerate of the sufferings of their young children at night, when compelled to go to sleep in the dark, lonely bed rooms. Cowardice and imagination appeal them in terror, and although they are the slightest foundation, are as real to them as fire, or burglars, or bears. A nurse will often intensify this apprehension by saying, "It's no wonder you are so afraid of nights, you are so naughty in the daytime." The defenseless, ignorant child gets into bed, thinking that some one is lurking round, and should absolutely forbid any frightening of the children in this respect, and see that their orders are carried out.

FOR QUICK RELIEF.

In cases of sudden and severe pains in the bowels caused by an accumulation of gases in the stomach, a hot infusion of peppermint is a valuable remedy for the older children; and for the tiny mites of humanity who are troubled with colic two or three drops of the essence in hot water will quickly give relief.

For quick relief for any ailment, no mother should think of giving spirits to her child, except in extreme cases, and under medical advice. Many a mother flies to hot alcoholic drinks on the slightest approach of a cold, giving a young child this supposed all-powerful remedy, and a rare few are left off from forming from taking these hot spiced stimulants.

THE AMER OF AFGHANISTAN.

An Autobiographical Sketch of a Governor by the Will of His People.

The Amer of Afghanistan, who was at first suspected of complicity with the Indian border troubles, but whose innocence is now well established is one of the most autocratic monarchs in the world. Not the czar of Russia nor the sultan of Turkey is more absolute in authority. Yet he is or was himself curiously subject to the will of the people in some respects. A few years ago he greatly desired to visit England and other European countries, and the British government was anxious that he should do so. But he did not venture to do so without the consent of his people. So he took a plebiscite on the subject. He sent a commission to every village in the empire to tell what he wanted to do, and explaining the advantages that would accrue to him and to the empire from a visit to the will of the people to take a vote on the subject and let him know the result. So the question was submitted to universal suffrage. After a few weeks the returns came in. A vast number were counted, and it was found that a considerable majority of the people were opposed to his leaving the country. He was disappointed, but acquiesced in the will of the people, and stayed at home sending his second son to England in his place.

THE HIGHEST DEATH RATE.

The highest death rate in the world is in the state of Chihuahua, Mexico, which although 7,000 feet above the sea has no drainage system worthy of the name.

AT THE UPPER OTTAWA SOURCES.

Big Game and Canyons and Immortal in Drama, as Described by a Missionary.

An Indian missionary, the Rev. Father Laniel of the Oblat Order, has returned lately to civilization from the longest trip yet made by any of his order to minister to aboriginal inhabitants of the wild and little known country watered by the sources of the upper Ottawa River. From the outer confines of civilization at Mattawa the missionary travelled no less than 800 miles through this rough north country, the greater part of his journey being made in a birch bark canoe. He passed by the headwaters of the Gatineau, the Deser, the Coulonge, the Manouche and Lake Keewau, visiting also the Indians of the posts of Barriere, Grand Lake Victoria, and Grassy Lake. At Barriere the missionary found 150 Indians congregated to trade with the factor of the Hudson Bay Company. Their method of bartering with the company is quite ingenious. For the first day or two after their appearance at the post they say nothing of their hunt and make no offer to sell anything to the factor. Finally their discretion is overcome by their want of tobacco or flour or trinkets, and they cautiously advance with a few skins which they dispose of for the means of supplying their immediate wants. To all inquiries they reply that the hunt has been a poor one and that they have secured but few trophies of their chase.

Gradually more and more peltries are produced, and soon the ENTIRE SEASON'S HUNT is disposed of, immediate use being made of the goods obtained in exchange with no regard for future necessities. Nominally, these Indians are Christian, but practically they live in the grossest immorality. Father Laniel in his last trip persuaded five couples to pass through the ceremony of matrimony and other missionaries testify to the difficulty which they experience in preventing polygamy and in inducing some of the leading men of the tribe to put aside their superstitious wives. These Indians are still exceedingly superstitious, and the killing of a bear is the occasion of a remarkable festival among them. The bear's den is placed upon a pole with a piece of tobacco in the mouth. While some contend that this is simply to show other Indians that they have been found, others say that it is to honor the animal and propitiate the spirit of its king. At times many bears sleep away in the den, and are occasionally seen upon a pole with a piece of tobacco in the mouth. While some contend that this is simply to show other Indians that they have been found, others say that it is to honor the animal and propitiate the spirit of its king.

Apartment from the skulls, the bones of animals killed in the chase are buried in the ground, thrown into deep water, or consumed with fire. The painted skin of a bear cub forms an essential part of the outfit of the conjurers or medicine men. One of the Indians met by Father Laniel killed five bears in one month. These animals are now reported to be very plentiful. The moose, the red deer, and the caribou are plentiful in the country hunted over by these Indians, who are consequently much more fortunate than those whose hunting grounds are in the interior of Labrador. ### A TRYING HUSBAND.

It is possible to carry even one's virtues to excess. Mrs. K. felt this to be true in the case of her husband's generosity. He was a very studious man, who lived "in the clouds" much of the time, and was quite lacking in practical common sense. A man of this kind, good and true though he may be is likely to cause his wife more or less anxiety and annoyance.

One fall Mrs. K. purchased a handsome cape for herself. It was to be her "best wrap" that winter, and she put it away in her closet with great care. Some days later she wanted it for a special occasion, but it was not to be found. After searching "high and low" for it, she went up to her husband's study and said to him:

"Have you seen anything of my new cape?"

"Capet" said Mr. K. dreamily. "Have I seen anything of your capet? Why, no, I guess not."

"Are you sure?"

"Why, yes, what should I be doing with your capet? I don't see. What a mistake it seems to me that I—yes, I did give a cape away to a poor woman I met at the door one day. She said she wanted a wrap of some kind, and I said, 'I'll give you my new capet.' I meant to give her your old one."

"My old one is in my closet, and you must have given away that handsome one, that I had never worn!"

"Why can't you keep your wife about you?"

"It is too bad," said the contrite profligate, but try to be more careful."

A few days later Mr. K. was out on his own when a rugged and evil-looking tramp came down the road and took the usual time to ask for the price of a meal or a drink.

Mrs. K. who was sitting by the window, seeing her husband in the man's hand, seemed to be a bit, which the tramp took and departed with such alacrity that he was out of sight before Mrs. K. could go out and say to her husband:

"You didn't give that creature a bill did you?"

"Why, yes, I did. I didn't have anything but a five-dollar bill, and I told him he might get a good meal out of it and bring back the change."

TOO MUCH SALT.

Many people eat altogether too much salt. The result is that the skin and kidneys are excessively taxed to get rid of the salt, and both are injured by it. Few people have healthy skins and kidneys when the kidneys are so taxed.

Land riots have occurred in the Roman Campagna, the peasants at Alamo and Marino, driven by distress, having made an attempt to squat on the land of Prince Colonna and being driven off by police and soldiers.

Great numbers of the noxious weeds are looked upon by the peasants nowadays as the cause of Italy's distress, just as the latifundia are said to have ruined Rome.

England has just discovered that sweet corn is a delicious vegetable and that corn stalks make good fodder for cattle. The London Standard lays down correct principles in recommending it. An advertisement with whom he was associated is said to have in his hands letters belonging to the Prince which compromise persons in high station at the court of Berlin.

GENERAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

Mr. J. Woodman, who has been assistant engineer for several years on the western division of the Canadian Pacific railway, has been promoted to engineer of the Western division, the position having been rendered vacant
by the death of the late D. A. Stewart.
The latest report from the Klondike is that Dawson City is threatened with a famine, and the Dominion officials at that place have issued a warning, advising all who have not a winter's supply to at once move to Fort Yukon or other points where there are larger stocks of food.

The Harry Lindley Dramatic Company, who are now touring the coast
cities, will again visit the Territories
early next year, and will play at Moose Jaw and other principal cities of the West. Harry is rejoiced to hear of the prosperity of the Territories, which,
he says, is reflected at the Coast.

Yesterday at noon the C.P.R. steamboat Athabasca swung out with her last cargo of passengers and freight from Fort William this season. As the big boat left the dock hundreds of truckmen and freight hands gathered together and gave three rousing cheers
and a tiger by way of a last adieu.—

Prof. Robertson has decided not to make any advance payment for butter
made in the Government creameries
during October, until the final settlement be made for the past season, which he hopes will be as soon as the balance of the butter now on hand is sold. This arrangement does not apply to the patrons of the creameries
which will be operated all winter.

The new Dominion one dollar bills have made their appearance here. They are quite different from the old familiar
"dollar," but present a neat attractive appearance, and bear splendid engravings of Lord and Lady Aberdeen. A lumbering scene is the central picture on the face, and the back is adorned with a good view of the Ottawa Parliament buildings.

Regina Leader: Yesterday at Knox church, Mr. Malcolm McIntyre, eldest son of John McIntyre, Esq., led to Hymen's altar Miss Emily Lander, daughter of the late E. Lander, Esq., formerly of Regina and Washington Territory. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. A. Carmichael, after which the bridal party repaired to the residence of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Child where a wedding repast was spread.
The happy couple have the very best wishes of a host of friends.

Throat Coughs

Is there a tickling in the throat? Do you cough a great deal, especially when lying down? Are you hoarse at times? Does nearly every cold you take settle in your throat? These "throat coughs" are very deceptive. Don't neglect them. Troches, or cough syrups won't touch the spot. You must take remedies that will enrich the blood, tone up the nerves, and heal the inflamed membranes.

SCOTT'S EMULSION of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites contains such remedies. It has wonderful nourishing and healing power. The cause of the cough is removed; the whole system is given new life and vigor; and the danger from threatening lung trouble is swept away.

It is rumored that the C.P.R. is to extended west from Reston into the Pipstone country. A Souris, Man., correspondent writes that a Government official has been directed to make a thorough inspection of the country
west of Reston, and make a report on it.

The Minister of Agriculture of the colonies of Victoria, South Australia, Tasmania and New Zealand recently held a conference and resolved to make an experimental shipment this winter
to the British market of 10,000 cases of fruit under the most improved conditions. The arrangements include a complete system of ventilation for every part of the chamber in which the fruit is conveyed.

The Globe, Toronto, is making a strong bid for circulation. Finding that the reduction in the price of paper and the introduction of type-setting machinery have made it possible to publish the paper at a less cost, the price has been reduced from 38 per annum to $4 per annum for the early morning edition, and the second edition has been discontinued. There is to be no reduction in the size of the paper.

The wheat king of the world resides in Argentina. He is an Italian emigrant, named Gonzalez, and his broad acres are situated in the south of the province of Buenos Ayres. His crop occupies an area of 60,000 acres. His numbers his workmen, says The Bist,
by the thousand, and each one receives a certain share of the profits. When the season's crop is harvested he fills 3,000 railway trucks with the grain.

The Canadian Pacific Railway excursions commenced December 6th.
Considerable reduction in rates have been made over former years. It is expected that travel will be heavy and many will visit their homes in Ontario and the lower provinces, who have been unable to do so heretofore. People for Newfoundland can also take advantage of these rates to Sydney, whence a new steamship line has been inaugurated to Placentia.

It is understood that important changes will shortly be made in the management of the western branch of the Massey Harris Company, and that Mr. John F. Lindsay, who has for a long time been general agent for the territory west to Moose Jaw will be promoted to the position of assistant manager at the Winnipeg office. Mr.
Lindsay will prove an efficient officer,
and he is now receiving the congratulations of his many friends in the west.

Mr. R. B. Gordon, Assistant Territorial Secretary, has received a letter from Registrar Wade, of the Yukon party, dated 31st October. The advance party consisting of Judge Maguire, Dr. Bonnar, Mr. Wade, Insp.
Starnes and a detachment of police,
had encountered stormy weather on Lake Bennett, and Mr. Wade states that they were obliged to "jettison some of their outfit," including his supply of forms. They saved the record books. He wrote to secure another supply of forms. The whole party were in good health.—Leader.

The good work done by the Government a few years ago in establishing cheese factories in Prince Edward Island is bringing forth good fruit.
There are now thirty-two cheese factories in operation in summer and nineteen creameries in winter. The value of the output for this year is estimated at over $300,000. A good many of the factories made twice as much cheese as they did in 1896, and a few of them three times as much.
All the factories now are joint stock companies of farmers. The Government has now no responsibility in the management of them.

The Canadian Pacific Railway will
at the beginning of the year institute a new method of making up trains over its entire system. Formerly, with the small freight cars used, about twenty loaded cars constituted a train, or what one engine could haul. The new freight cars at present coming out, however,
are very much larger, having a maximum capacity of 60,000 pounds,
so that it takes fewer cars to make up a train. The new system will be worked on a tonnage basis, a certain number of tons only going to a train. On the Ontario and Quebec division of the road a somewhat similar system is already in effect. The new system will be put in force in the North Bay division on December 1, and on the other divisions of the road on January 1.

At Wolsley a few days ago, James Fleming, a well to do farmer of the district, and father of a large family, was thrown from his wagon while intoxicated and killed. He was driving a team of colts, and the general feeling at Wolsley is that the ones who started him for home in the helpless condition in which he was are largely responsible for his death. A coroner's jury returned the following verdict:—"We
the coroner's jury find that the deceased came to his death from a wound received by being thrown from his rig while in a state of intoxication, and we further find that James Bailey and Stewart Mundell contributed to his death by supplying liquor to deceased while intoxicated and for allowing deceased to be removed from the premises while in such a condition, and we further find that Chas. Morgan and Wm. Armstrong are responsible to some extent for starting deceased for one while in such a state."

Hon. E. Blake made an important speech at Strathroy last week, one reference in which makes it appear possible that he may return to Canadian politics. He warmly endorses Laurier's course in England on the trade question.

At this season of the year, and often some months earlier, it has been the custom of the C.P.R. to shorten the hours of work in the workshops. This year the work has been so brisk that the shops are running with increased staff for a full day of ten hours and with frequent calls for overtime.

For several days last week a coroner's inquest was held at Calgary over the death of Fremantle Robinson who was killed in a collision of two freight trains at Willow Creek. The coroner's jury brought in a verdict of manslaughter, and it is said that one of the train crew is implicated in the charge.

The output of the Manitoba creameries this year exceeds in value that of 1896 by $105,000. This is a large increase and indicates the rapid strides
being made in this branch of agriculture. Nearly the whole of the output was sold for consumption west of Port Arthur. The bulk of one creamery was shipped to England.

Breedsall, the great English authority on the world's wheat supply, has just published his report for this year. He estimates the world's wheat supply at 1,000,000,000 bushels, and says that only about 100,000,000 bushels are not grown in the wheat belt. He will prevent the shortage from being overcome. France and America-Hungary are certainly short. Russia is unknown. But Australia and India are said to promise heavy yields.

Lawrence McCarthy, probably the oldest man in the world, and the last survivor of the combatants at Waterloo,
has just died in a workhouse at London, Eng., aged 115 years. McCarthy was born in Nenagh early in 1782, and had a vivid recollection of the horrors of the rebellion of 1792. He had attained his thirty third year when he fought at Waterloo, where he was severely wounded.

The Minister of Customs has decided upon two new regulations of interest to Canadian business men. Packages through the Post on which there is duty to pay will now go direct from the boundary to the customs house nearest to destination. Exporters will be required to make a return to the railway companies of the goods shipped from Canada to insure greater accuracy
in the figures furnished to the authorities.

Seems as if consumption always picks out the brightest and best. Fully one-sixth of all the deaths that occur in the world are caused by consumption. Many things were once considered impossible. It would be strange if medical science did not make some progress. The telegraph and telephone, the phonograph, the electric light—all were once impossible, and once it was impossible to cure consumption. That was before the time of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Taken according to directions, this standard remedy will cure 98 per cent.
of all cases of consumption. Consumption is caused and fostered by impurity in the blood. It is cured by purity and richness in the blood—surely, certainly cured by the "Medical Discovery." It builds up solid healthy flesh and vigorous strength.
Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, a 1008 page medical work, profusely illustrated, will be sent free on receipt of 31
one cent stamps to cover postage only.

"Mamma, there is a very hungry looking tramp at the kitchen door asking for breakfast; may I get it for him? I can do it all myself," and the soft blue eyes looked up with an appealing glance to the face of Mrs. Harper, as her beautiful little daughter Mary stood in the doorway of the cool, shaded library where the mother sat writing.

"It will give you a heartache to see how poor he looks," and sweet Maryyru Harper drew her mother to the vine-shaded window to peep at the poor, shaven looking man, sitting on the doorstep, waiting patiently the return of the pure-hearted, soft-eyed little girl, who had promised him something to eat. "if mamma would let her do it."

"Oh, thank you, mamma dear," said the happy little housekeeper, as she hurried to the kitchen door to tell the poor fellow that she would give him a nice breakfast, "for mamma had given permission."

And a right royal meal did the happy-hearted child serve up in the clean

Alice, the only remaining child of the dearly beloved old minister, Dr. Calder, won all hearts by her kind helpfulness to the poor, the sick and suffering, and it was at the bedside of such patients that young Dr. Harper learned to love, the

And when the sweet, baby girl came to bless the home, it was again an occasion of rejoicing in the pews, as the tender-voiced, old minister gave to the pretty, blue-eyed baby the name of his sainted wife, "Mary Calder," who had slept in the quiet churchyard many years, but whose memory and name

The house, which was large and roomy, stood upon a bluff sloping gently down to a broad, beautiful river, whose banks were dotted with pretty homes, with broad verandas and green lawns sloping down to

At sunset of the day upon which my story opens, Dr. Harper called the happy little ones to the bank of the river for the accustomed ride in the fairy boat, "Alice." The gentle mother not being well enough to go with them, sat in her easy chair on the veranda watching the happy party on the high

The idea of the invention, if it can be so termed, is to construct at some appropriate spot on the seacoast a semi-submarine fort. This fort would partially underlie a section of the coast at the depth of say 40 feet, though no limit in this regard has been fixed.

DISTANCE FROM LAND.
With this sight before him, it not hard to understand that his calculations may be made as perfect as it is possible for the human mind to contrive.

Of course, no vessel will know where this torpedo station is. Craft will be

Electricity is the power which will move the torpedo. It is the power that will control the action of the explosive when it starts upon its journey. Then the men who operate the torpedo apparatus perform their duties and in the armor of divers. The officer in charge is in a turret-like room, which is a portion of the camera obscura, farther perhaps, not by that name. The principle is best illustrated by the following hypothetical experiment: Let a small hole be bored in a window shutter and the room darkened. If now the beam of light entering the room by this hole be intercepted by a sheet of white paper, held at a small distance from the hole, an inverted image of objects without will be point to any position either nearer to the hole or further from it the image becomes indistinct and confused. At the point of greatest distinctness the image is said to be focused. Such being the principle of the camera, it is evident that in practice the instrument may assume many forms, provided always that it consists of a darkened box or chamber having a hole at one end for the insertion of a lens or graphy in a way which would only have been conceived by a man who had studied along the lines which in his regard others had deemed of no use and impossible of development. Thus, beneath the water the officer who directs the firing of the torpedo will have as clear and accurate a view of the position of his enemy as the gunner aboard ship or the Captain in the command of the vessel.

names place the torpedo in the curiously formed gun and proceed to regulate the storage battery which every torpedo contains so that there will be no failure of the current at a critical period. Naturally the torpedo is not taken apart for this purpose, but two small levers inside are operated by means of a series of electric buttons so that everything may be acanged that when the course of the torpedo is once laid it can be set, as it were, so that it is kept upon this course as if the most veteran of helmsmen were in control. Now, then, the torpedo is ready and its course set. The officer in the dark chamber of the camera obscura gives the signal. Aloud with absolute silence the missile starts on its momentous journey. Buckles, belts, and girdles form a very striking part of woman's attire

Girdles are to be worn not only with gowns and fancy waists this season, but also with fur and cloth coats, and they are made particularly handsome for this reason. It would never do to wear a cheap article on a fine coat. The prices of these bejewelled belts range from the inevitable market

Cut steel is the most fashionable material at present, and one of the best designs for a girdle is worthy of description. In the first place it can be used as a family affair, for it will fit the waist of a slender girl or that of
